

Congratulations! Watching you all graduate was such a proud moment for me. I cannot imagine how hard you must have worked to get to that point and your resilience truly humbles me.

Micro, small and medium sized businesses contribute 34% of our national GDP. Did you know that collectively you contribute almost R200 million to the economy per annum and you employ over 1141 people? Our country needs courageous people like you. Please continue to inspire others around you. If you feel discouraged, always remember that you are never alone. Reach out to each other and to us. We are all invested in your success.

Bridgit Evans,
SABF Executive Director

The Tholoana Enterprise Programme, a dynamic collaboration between the SAB Foundation and Fetola, is empowering small business owners across South Africa. Designed to assist women, youth and people with disabilities, especially in the rural areas, this award-winning programme challenges entrepreneurs to reimagine their businesses and unlock their full potential.

Beyond individual businesses, the Tholoana Enterprise Programme creates a ripple effect of positive change. By focusing on building resilient, profitable ventures, the programme is able to create jobs and leave lasting legacies in communities. This holistic approach addresses the challenges faced by entrepreneurs, providing practical solutions, access to markets, finance, and essential business tools.

Fetola's expertise and proven methodology empowers and upskills business leaders, aligning with SAB Foundation's objectives, to ensure consistent, deep-impact results across various sectors.

Since its inception, the programme has disbursed over R230 million in grant funding and business support, benefiting more than 600 entrepreneurs. Notably, 48% of these entrepreneurs are women, 56% are youth, 60% are from rural areas, and 3% are people living with disabilities. This underscores the programme's commitment to inclusivity and diversity, fostering a more inclusive entrepreneurial ecosystem.

Participants on the Tholoana Enterprise Programme undergo a transformative journey of self-discovery, goal setting, and growth. Mentors play a pivotal role in guiding entrepreneurs, setting milestones that pave the way for success. With a curriculum that includes five compulsory business skills workshops and tailored elective support, the programme ensures that participants receive the guidance and tools needed to thrive.

This is more than just a business development initiative; it is a catalyst for change, inspiring entrepreneurs to dream big, achieve their goals, and make a meaningful impact in their communities. It's not just changing businesses, it's changing lives.

Catherine Wijnberg,
Fetola CEO

The background of the slide is a dark, warm-toned bokeh effect. It consists of numerous out-of-focus light spots in shades of gold, orange, and yellow, creating a shimmering, celebratory atmosphere. These spots vary in size and brightness, with some appearing as large, soft circles and others as smaller, sharper points of light. The overall effect is reminiscent of light reflecting off particles or a festive night scene.

TP14's IMPACT & ACHIEVEMENTS

Group turnover growth

The participants of our fourteenth cohort had an impressive recovery and growth of 23.85% increase in turnover of which equates to an overall increase of R3 176 645 between the first quarter of entering the programme and the last.

Note Monthly growth calculated as the [percent difference in total cohort turnover in quarter one (June – August 2022) vs the last quarter (September – November 2023)]*

Individual turnover growth

7 of the businesses increased turnover by over 200% since programme entry while 11% of the cohort has experienced growth of more than 100%

Africa's food history is not documented as well as it should be. There are some really smart people in these spaces who just need support, hence we started African Culinary Library.

What do you love most about what you do?

The reactions that we get from our guests; learning and sharing with our team every day.

Where do you draw inspiration from for your recipes and what do you look for in a dish?

The process is really random. It could be a supplier that has an amazing product, a flavour combination stuck in my head – it literally could be anything. As long as we can articulate the story clearly, then anything goes.

Complete the sentence: In 10 years, Yusi Ndlovu will...

Hmm ... be relaxing in Mozambique at my grill shack serving prawns and cocktails ... or championing the African continent on a bigger scale. I'll take either one.

What has been your greatest challenge and achievement in your career so far?

COVID-19 took the wind out of many people's sails, especially in our industry. That was really tough. My greatest achievement has to be setting up EDGE and seeing it in full swing.

Who is Yusi Ndlovu outside of the kitchen?

So chilled! I read a lot, but action movies are always a good way to disconnect. Otherwise when time allows, you will find me in Paternoster watching the sky. I always try to do as little as possible whenever I'm outside of work.

If you could choose anyone to invite to dinner, who would it be?

Miles Davis, for sure.

Please tell us a little bit about yourself.

I am a mother and an entrepreneur. Over the past three years I have also developed a love for reading and it has changed my perspective on life, how I view situations and how I can solve them.

Please tell us a bit about Buttercup Farmhouse.

It is an organic food and health beverage outlet that specialises in its prime product, the Cucurbita Latte (vegetable coffee made from butternut). We have various hot and cold treats that we process using our vegetables.

Your products are so unique. Where does the inspiration come from?

Buttercup Farmhouse was registered in 2019 with the concept of initially processing vegetables into spices. After many years of working in part-time jobs, starting new businesses and failing, I finally took a step back in late 2018 to re-evaluate myself and start doing something that can change the world at large. As a small-scale farmer specialising in crop production over the past five years, I have always loved farming and believed that I will somehow have to dominate this sector and monetise my skills. Just as I was about to pursue processing vegetables into spices, the world was hit by a global

Electrical entrepreneur paves his way to success

SECUNDA - Robert Mbuyazi left a well-paying job in mining to pursue his electrical services side business in 2021, unaware of the challenges ahead. He often didn't have the proper guidance for his entrepreneurial journey.

His company, Mabhodla Electrical Constructors, is an electrical and instrument maintenance company operating in Secunda. Mbuyazi's entrepreneurial journey is an inspiring example of a side hustle turning into a lucrative business.

"Entrepreneurial endeavours are not for the faint-hearted. I recall months of slow business and the occasional cash flow issues. Through it all, I was determined to not give up, to ensure that the business continues to run so that jobs can be retained, and new jobs be made available. Slowly but surely, I managed to expand my client base and secure more sub-contractor roles," he says.

Mbuyazi always encourages aspiring entrepreneurs to find a mentor, as he believes it is crucial for success. "My mentor is one of the people that has helped me see the bigger picture. He gives me hope when I need encouragement and has helped me to look beyond the month-to-month performance of the business and focus on the future. He has changed my whole mindset."

He spends his days managing a team of six full-time staff who shuttle between responding to emergency requests from the local Department of Public Works to providing maintenance services to over 40 shops at Secunda Mall.

In just over two years, the Mabhodla Electrical Constructors team achieved significant milestones, including moving into their own office space. Mbuyazi counts this as his biggest business highlight to date.

The site has several other units that are being rented out to provide an additional source of income for the business. It's important to have multiple income sources and use innovation and technology to expand the business. My expansion plans include solar energy, which I hope to pursue after recently obtaining my certification to install solar power units."

Mbuyazi's vision for the future is to grow the business and employ over 300 people across the country; to achieve a national footprint and a strong presence in every province. Given Mbuyazi's impressive achievements in just over two years, there's no doubt that he and the team at Mabhodla Electrical Constructors can reach this ambitious goal. He's entrepreneurial spirit is a true inspiration of determination and resilience.

ORATILE Kids clothing brand founder Tshepo Monamodi is passionate about kids' wellness.

The 39-year-old told Daily Sun that her business is not about shoemaking but taking leather and creating something comfortable, where people will be able to create beautiful memories with their kids.

Tshepo said she discovered her inspiration during a site visit to a farm that processed leather for furniture and shoes.

"This visit planted the seed that eventually grew into Oratile Kids, and she has never looked back.

Oratile Kids makes and sells custom-made shoes for little feet in colour combinations to the customer's desire.

She told Daily Sun that the spark that ignited the flame of Oratile Kids was an everyday parent's challenge, which is finding comfortable shoes for chubby be-by feet.

Her quest started when she embarked on a journey to find shoes that would provide comfort and style for her little one in 2017.

This search led her to dive into the world of baby shoes, researching and learning the art of shoemaking in a small bedroom in Mamelodi, Tšhepo.

"When we started, we couldn't afford full leather shoes. I would drive from Pretoria where the business is based, to Joburg CBD's back streets and buy whatever leather officials I could get my hands on. So, we could never repeat a colour combo and what we had for the market was it," Tshepo said.

"Around 80% of our shoes are made to order through our Facebook channel, allowing parents and caregivers to actively participate in the shoemaking process. Each shoe fits perfectly and provides utmost comfort with a personal touch that makes all the difference."

She said that the impact of Oratile Kids extends far beyond fashionable footwear.

"It's a hub of learning and opportunity for the local community. Through the youth employment YES programme, every year, three young women fresh out of high school are provided the chance to learn the art of shoemaking, opening doors to new skills and employment.

"I'm proud to say I currently employ three full-time staff members and two casual workers. My passion has always been to see my business inspire the growth of the people and communities around me," said Tshepo.

Tshepo Monamodi is the founder of Oratile Kids.
